

CALL FOR PAPERS
Conference on Applied Interculturality Research
Graz, Austria, 7-10 April 2010

The first Conference on Applied Interculturality Research (cAIR10) will be held at the University of Graz, Austria, from 7 to 10 April 2010.

cAIR combines the resources of research (universities, institutes) and practice (government, civil society, schools, media) to raise awareness about racism and xenophobia and to reduce its prevalence and impact. cAIR brings together practice and research in all areas of interculturality, and helps practitioners to benefit from research, and researchers from practice. cAIR promotes high standards in both practice and research. Keynote addresses will be given by international leaders in interculturality research and practice.

All practitioners and all researchers in all areas of interculturality are invited to submit project summaries that highlight the mutual benefits of collaboration between research and practice.

- By practitioner we mean any person who is professionally involved in any practical (i.e. non-research) project or activity in any area of interculturality, including for example project directors and leaders, supervisors, coordinators, administrators, organisers, planners, developers, activists, artists, musicians, actors, teachers, educators, social workers, publishers, advisors, consultants, officials, promoters and policy makers.
- By researcher we mean any person who is qualified in a relevant academic discipline and professionally involved in research in any area of interculturality.

Graz is Europe's first human rights city and home to an unusually large number of migrant organisations, interculturally oriented NGOs, and conferences and studies on intercultural issues. The University of Graz hosts research and teaching in many areas of interculturality.

Project submissions must conform to the guidelines published on the cAIR homepage at <http://www.uni-graz.at/fAIR/cAIR10/>.

The submission deadline is 31 August 2009.
