General points

We are looking forward to your poster presentation at cAIR10. This guide aims to help international participants create a successful poster. The following points are obligatory:

1. Print your poster on DIN-A0 (84x119 cm).
2. Present your poster in portrait orientation (vertical, like this) - not landscape orientation (horizontal).
3. Write in good English. If necessary, consider asking a native speaker for help.
4. Avoid font sizes smaller than 8 (on A4) - including all numbers in tables or graphs. (This text is size 9.)
5. Use high-resolution photographs and graphics to permit enlargement from A4 to A0. The graph opposite could not be printed – it is not sharp enough.

Apart from that, please present your work as you consider appropriate. We hope that the following ideas are useful.

Directly relevant photos make your poster more attractive, easier to read, and easier to remember. Acknowledge the source or photographer in small type (e.g. font size 6).

Structure

*Follow the structure of your abstract submission
- but feel free to change the headings*

- relevant background in research and practice
- aims (How do you combine research and practice?)
- details of your approach or method
- your main contribution
- implications of your achievements or findings
- references

Content: Things to aim for

- Balance between practice and research
  - How do they interact?
  - Is a new synergy achieved?
- Impact on racism and xenophobia
  - Is the impact real?
  - How can it be verified or monitored?
  - What role did the research play?

Layout

Write mainly in point form. Limit paragraphs to three lines. Leave space between paragraphs, like this.

- Either use this layout or (better!) invent your own
- At least change the colors! Make each poster unique
- Consider aesthetics: Balance? Matching colors?

Tables and graphs

- Include only directly relevant information
- Delete anything that most people will not read
- Avoid small font sizes (no smaller than 8 on DIN-A4)

Highlight the main points

- Help people to quickly understand your main points (e.g. make a big contrast between headings and text)
- That will motivate people to stay and read the detail

Be concise

When revising, explore ways to reduce the text.

- Delete unnecessary words - then delete some more!
- Convert blocks of text into points (like this)
- Leave space between blocks of text (avoid clutter)

References

If you refer to publications in your poster, please list them at the end in font size 8 in a well-known format.
